Catering and hospitality is concerned with providing the public with food, drink and accommodation. It is an industry that is fast-moving and constantly changing and developing, as can be seen from exposure on television programmes and in newspaper supplements, tourism brochures and magazines. Employers include:

- hotels and guest houses offering accommodation from budget to luxury
- restaurants, including themed restaurants, pub restaurants and fast food outlets
- pubs, clubs and bars, including bar facilities in hotels and restaurants
- theme parks, cinemas, museums, art galleries and leisure resorts
- schools, colleges, hospitals, nursing homes, railways, airports and cruise ships.

There are jobs in catering and hospitality for people with a wide range of qualifications, from GCSEs through to degrees. Entrants to hotel management usually have an HNC/HND, a degree or postgraduate qualification. There are many relevant courses to help people prepare for entry to the industry at all levels.
